

BRITAIN FEARS MOROCCO WAR

German Newspapers Take Serious View of Situation.

SILENCE AT THE ADMIRALTY

No Authenticity of Report That the British Fleet Was Held in Home Waters Owing to the Moroccan Crisis.

London, July 28.—Rumors of war over the Morocco situation continue to divide public attention with the British crisis over the veto power of the house of lords. There is talk of a conference of the powers similar to that held at Algiers four years ago.

Premier Asquith made a statement in the house of commons on the subject of Morocco which fully bore out the description of the situation as one of real anxiety. The position the premier said had reached a point at which it was bound to become difficult and harassing unless a solution was found. He said the government had thought it right from the beginning to make it clear that failing a satisfactory settlement, Great Britain must become an active party to a discussion of the situation.

The Berlin and other German newspapers take a serious view of the situation, but the statement is made in official quarters that nothing has occurred to cause anxiety.

At Lloyds, however, war risks against hostilities between Great Britain and Germany within three months rose from 5 to 8 per cent. In some cases even 10 per cent was paid. Against the risk of war between France and Germany 12 per cent was quoted.

The admiralty would not give any information as to the authenticity of the report that the British fleet had been held in home waters owing to the Moroccan crisis. Much speculation has been stirred up in official circles by the report that the admiralty has canceled the visit of the Atlantic fleet to Norway.

That Germany will get compensation in South Africa as a result of her descent upon Agadir and in return for the free hand which France is seeking in Morocco is contended here, but it is also held that Great Britain is not going to permit the establishment of a German naval base on the west coast of Africa if she can prevent it.

Boy Fatally Wounds Sister.
Aurora, Ill., July 28.—Playfully pointing a revolver at his twelve-year-old sister, Monroe Landeau, a ten-year-old boy, fired and fatally injured the little girl.

SHOOT GIRL SIX TIMES AND FIGHTS POLICE

Sacramento, Calif., July 27.—Springing suddenly out of an alleyway Wednesday a man supposed to be C. H. Emory, recently of San Francisco, shot and killed Miss Anna Dudley, a stenographer at the state engineer's office, and formerly stenographer for ex-Governor Gillet. The slayer, pursuer by a police posse, held the young woman at bay and wounded two bystanders before he was shot, and killed.

He drew two revolvers and, reloading several times, fired 40 shots at the police before he was slain.

CORSET STEEL SAVES LIFE

Bullet Striking Woman at Holland Is Deflected by It.

Holland, Mich., July 28.—Miss Hulda Mueller, a Cincinnati nurse, owes her life to a corset. While walking through the grove at Waukatzoo she was struck by a stray bullet, the missile striking a corset steel and lodging in the region above the appendix. The bullet was easily removed and the victim will recover.

Harold Hassig, of Grand Rapids, and Frank Lee of Chicago, who had been shooting mud turtles across the bay, were arrested and will have to stand trial for assault and battery.

IMPALED ON ARM OF SEAT

Ionia Man Slips on Banana Peel in Boarding Car.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 28.—Victim of a strange accident, Edward J. Wizard of Ionia was seriously, if not fatally, hurt here.

The Ionian was hurrying to a Marshall street car when he stepped on a banana peel, slipped and was impaled on the arm of a seat. He was taken to Nichols hospital with a gaping wound in his side.

SHOT BY DEPUTY SHERIFF

Farm Hand, Caught in Trap of Jealous Husband, Badly Wounded.

Cailliac, Mich., July 28.—Doc Adams, a farm hand for Reuben Joblin, near Luther, is near death's door as the result of a bullet wound inflicted by Deputy Sheriff Angell of Luther.

Joblin had been suspicious for some time of his wife and Adams, and set a trap for them. He announced he was going to their second farm, a few miles distant, and would work there two days. He went as far as Luther, where he picked up the deputy and returned home. They entered the house and surprised the two occupying the same room. Adams gave fight, attacking the deputy. After a short fight, in which the deputy got the worst of it, he drew a revolver and shot Adams in the side. Angell claims he shot in self-defense. Physicians say Adams will die.

EVERYTHING LOST

NO INSURANCE ON PROPERTY DESTROYED BY FIRE LAST NIGHT.

FLAMES WORK MUCH COSTLY DAMAGE ON THE FOSTER FARM.

Horses, Calves, Pigs, Hay, Grain, Barns and Tools all Razed—House Saved.

A complete loss of crops, stock, machinery and tools and no insurance—this is Ed Foster's experience in his first year of farming on his new place east of town, which he bought only last fall.

Mr. Foster had 315 bushels of wheat threshed Thursday; the harvesting machine and the threshers were still on the place, when half an hour before midnight one of the threshers discovered that the big barn and the tool house were in flames. The engine was attached to the new threshing machine in the barn owned by William Walters, and drawn out. One load of wheat was brought out. Then the work of the flames went on without once being checked. Four horses belonging to Ed Foster, one belonging to his brother and two of William Walters' were burned. Thirty-two pigs and five nice calves, the wheat, the oats, the hay, all the machinery, the corn crib, tool house—all went up in smoke.

The water tank had been filled that evening and when the house got dangerously hot, the neighbors, who had arrived by this time in great numbers, helped to pour water on the house and to carry out all the furniture. However the house was spared.

Mr. Foster moved out last fall from Detroit and bought the Ben Loomis place north of the Spencer place, where his brother Charles lives. Without one cent of insurance he faces this morning a loss which as yet he cannot estimate. It represents the work, the product, the profits of a season, and Mr. Foster has the sympathy of the whole country-side in this tremendous calamity. It is thought that the fire may have caught from a spark from the threshing machine.

STEAM ROLLER RUNS AWAY

Crashes Down Hill and Wrecks Post-office at Houghton, Mich.

Houghton, Mich., July 28.—Excitement was caused at Houghton when a twelve-ton steam roller used on the principal business street became unmanageable and rolled down a 30 per cent hill three blocks, crashing into the front of the postoffice building and wrecking the structure. Nobody was injured.

Carelessness Costs His Arm.

Hastings, Mich., July 28.—Trying to fix a loose belt without stopping the engine cost Richard Laubugh his right arm. The arm was caught in the belt and Laubugh was whirled around the shaft three times before the machinery could be stopped. Amputation at the shoulder was necessary, so badly was the arm injured. Laubugh is twenty-one years old.

Politeness Costs His Life.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 28.—Sherwood Schaaf, a Muskegon interurban conductor, stepped aside to let a passenger on the car while he was returning home to dinner. He fell to the pavement from the rear platform, suffering a concussion of the brain, and died in Dutton hospital.

Typhoid Breaks Out at Grand Rapids.

Grand Rapids, Mich., July 28.—A typhoid fever epidemic has broken out here as a result of citizens drinking contaminated water. Twenty-five cases are reported, with one death.

ALLEGES THERE IS MONEY TRUST

Claims It Can Control Credit, Exchanges and Deposits.

LINDBERGH ASKS AN INQUIRY

Minnesota Representative Thinks that Certain Financial Powers Can Produce Business Depression at Will.

Washington, July 28.—The "money trust" of Wall street is to be investigated by congress.

In order to determine whether there is a great banking combination, which has the power to control credit, exchanges and deposits and to bring on business depressions and panics, as charged by Representative Lindbergh of Minnesota, before the house committee on rules, the committee at its next meeting will report a resolution directing an exhaustive investigation of the subject.

No decision has been reached as to whether the inquiry shall be conducted by the monetary commission or by the house committee on banking and currency. Mr. Lindbergh doesn't care who makes the investigation so as it does something.

Representative Weeks of Massachusetts, who is a member of the monetary commission and a banker, also appeared before the rules committee on the Lindbergh resolution. While he didn't oppose the inquiry and indeed rather urged that the monetary commission be instructed to make it, he scoffed at the idea that there was such a thing as a "money trust."

"If I had the time," he said, "I could show this committee that such a thing as an efficient combination of capital in banking matters could not exist."

"But," suggested Representative Nelson of Wisconsin, a member of the rules committee, "could such a money trust not go beyond banking and yet affect banking?"

Mr. Weeks admitted that this might be the case.

The Lindbergh resolution recites that "our present system of money exchange and credit entails on the people enormous losses due presumably to speculation, gambling and manipulation," and declares that these practices are directed through well defined centers, the greatest of which it is believed does actually have the power of controlling credit, exchanges and deposits to the extent of being actually able to bring on business depressions, and even business disaster."

Representative Lindbergh, who is a radical Republican insurgent, in arguing in favor of his resolution, insisted that the importance of the subject could not be overestimated.

FISHER TO GO TO ALASKA

New Secretary of Interior Will Remain in North Until Sept. 8.

Washington, July 28.—Secretary of the Interior Walter L. Fisher will leave Washington Saturday night for an extended tour over the projects of his department in the far west and in Alaska. Secretary Fisher will remain in Chicago until Tuesday and is due to sail for Alaska from Seattle Aug. 14. He will remain in Alaska until Sept. 8, studying the coal, mineral, harbor and railroad situation.

The trip is expected to be exceedingly fruitful in results, as the administration is looking to Secretary Fisher to outline legislation for the development of that territory.

M'NAMARA IS CONFIDENT

Man Held in Los Angeles Plot Says He Won't "Knock" McManigal.

Los Angeles, Cal., July 28.—"Oh, what's the use to be a knocker?" asked John J. McManigal, when asked what he thought of Orrie McManigal, who is alleged to have confessed concerning a plot to blow up the Los Angeles Times, in connection with which McManigal and his brother James are charged with murder.

"I am confident of the outcome of the trial," he said. "Perhaps this accounts for my gaining in weight. I hope the trial of myself and my brother will be confined to the courtroom, which is the proper place for it."

REORGANIZATION IS BEGUN

American Tobacco Company Appoints Committees for Purpose.

New York, July 28.—The first formal action in the way of readjusting the business of the American Tobacco company in conformity with the decision of the United States supreme court was taken in the appointment of committees to represent the holders of the senior securities, and co-operate with the management in the work of reorganization.

It may be assumed from the appointment of the committees that the company has a readjustment plan well under way.

LA FOLLETTE BILL WINS

Passed by Senate by Vote of 48 to 32.

Offered as Compromise Between La Follette's Original Bill and Underwood Bill.

Washington, July 28.—The senate, by a vote of 48 to 32, passed the La Follette wool revision bill, offered as a compromise between Senator La Follette's original substitute, and the Underwood's bill as it came from the house. The bill was passed by the votes of all of the Democrats voting, of all of the insurgents except two—Borah and Dixon—and with the votes of two regular Republicans—McCumber of North Dakota, and Nelson of Minnesota.

The bill carries a duty of 35 per cent on raw wool, and makes a corresponding reduction in the manufacture of wool.

The bill will go to the house and to a conference committee of the two houses, and it is expected the result will be a bill revising the woolen schedule on a basis of 30 per cent for raw wool, and corresponding reductions in the manufacture of wool as they now appear in the bill, which passed the senate.

Comes to the Aid of Dr. Wiley.

Washington, July 28.—A resolution expressing confidence in Dr. Harvey W. Wiley, chief of the chemistry bureau of the department of agriculture, recommended for removal on technical grounds by Attorney General Wickersham, has been introduced by Representative Roddenberry of Georgia.

NO LICENSE, NO DOG, SAYS POUND MASTER, WOMAN SAVES LIFE

Thursday afternoon, as two little colored lads were coming happily along in the south end of town with a big nice Shepherd dog which someone had made them a present of, they were suddenly swooped down upon by the pound-master. The gift-dog, it appeared, did not have a license to exist and make these little owners happy. The pound-master peremptorily took possession of the animal and the grief of the lads drew out the entire neighborhood. Women pleaded and men stormed, but "No license, no dog," was the severe mandate. Finally one of the women solved the trouble practically by handing the children a dollar to get a license with, and another took the dog into her kitchen while the precious document was being secured.

STILL FIGHT FIRE

Battle Creek, July 27.—Battle Creek's "fire jinx" is still working, another business district blaze today resulting in the fourth general alarm within ten days. The fire started Wednesday night in the basement of the McCall bakery, Main street, and before it could be located, smoke was pouring from every stairway in the block. The actual loss, however, will not pass $1,000. Fireman Walter Johnson, Engine Co. No. 3, was missed during the fire and was found unconscious on the floor by Chief Weeks and Captain Hamilton just in time to save his life.

SCOUTS TONIGHT

BIG DEMONSTRATION IS PLANNED ON NORMAL GROUNDS THIS EVENING.

RECORD TO BE ESTABLISHED FOR FIREBUILDING WITHOUT MATCHES.

Two Scouts May be Advanced to First-class—Honors to be Conferred.

Camp Sherzer, July 28.—Preparations are going busily forward for the out-of-door demonstration this evening in the amphitheatre north of the properties of President Jones and T. C. Owen, which may be reached by pedestrians and automobiles through the driveway between the president's house and the science building on Forest avenue. The giving of the caribou dance and the tilting game and such events involves much preparation of both scouts and material, and in all this training of scouts and fashioning of impements Mr. Seton has taken the greater part, with all the boys eagerly following.

One record which the boys are waiting to see broken is that of getting fire.

It is quite likely that two of the scouts, Jerome Sherzer and Lamar Kishlar, will be made First Class scouts this evening, if before that time they have an opportunity of taking an examination in several points on which they have prepared.

Mr. Seton has offered a scout knife to the scout who wins in the first aid work this evening.

Thursday evening after the lecture, Mr. Seton, DeForrest Ross and family and Mr. Hatch went out to camp and joined the scouts in a corn roast and watermelon feed.

Early this morning Camp Sherzer sat in council around the camp-fire to deliberate on the Roland Mills case. He had done so cleverly in the man hunt that he was declared the winner and this evening the honorable nickname of Flying Fox will be conferred upon him.

THE FINEST STUFF THEY MAKE IN THE WORLD, SAYS SETON OF SCOUTS

One of the most engaging of Ernest Thompson Seton's lectures was that of Thursday afternoon on a subject which has challenged interested speculation ever since its announcement: "The Natural History of the Ten Commandments." Mr. Seton said at once that this seemed like a formidable theological subject. His excuse was that he had found the adopting of a theory and then dealing fairly with the facts an excellent way to approach certain subjects, even though research compelled the abandoning of the theory later. "I had an idea long ago," he said, "that the Ten Commandments, on which we believe our civilization to be based, were not arbitrary but fundamental. I made this my working theory. I looked for the evidence in the world of animals. The simplest way to proceed was to look for penalties, for penalties are attached to the breaking of law."

What may be called the six lower commandments of the ten, dealing with man's duty to man, he considered first. First, the law of obedience, which is the basic idea of the fifth commandment. To find that this law obtains among animals one does not have to go outside the barnyard, where the mother hen calls her chicks under her wing against the coming of a hawk. The penalty of disobedience is death.

The property instinct, put in the form of "Thou shalt not steal," is strong in animals, as was denoted by the tale Mr. Seton told of some dogs he had seen at Petoskey. The leader of a pack of trained dogs which were being exhibited there was a big powerful creature who bullied all the pack, and of whom a certain little dog was particularly afraid. This little dog had been eating heartily of an ample meal when he came into possession of a choice bone. He was too full to eat more, so he hid it in a swamp and lay down at a distance until he should feel hungry to dig up the bone and go at it. Presently the big leader appeared and in sniffing around smelled the bone. He began to dig for it, when, from his watching place, rushed out the little dog and faced the leader with the fury born of righteous anger and offended property rights. A moment later the big dog seemed to consider it a poor case anyway and went off affecting disdain. The point is this: in open fight, where rights were equal, the big dog would have won in a cause which the little dog would not have had the courage to contest. But in walking off the big leader showed a recognition of the property rights of the little fellow.

EVERYONE INVITED TO SPECIAL MEETING OF THE COUNCIL TONIGHT

A special meeting of the Common Council will be held at the Council Hall this Friday evening at 7:30 o'clock for the purpose of taking action relative to the construction of the Congress street bridge.

This meeting will be of most vital importance to the welfare of the city, for the result of its deliberations may mean the gain or loss of not less than $10,000 to the taxpayers, also litigation and long delay in the work of construction.

Mayor Townner earnestly requests all who have the interests of the city at heart to attend this meeting.

There seems to be a difference of opinion as to the advisability of the Council's accepting the proposition of the D. J. & C. in regard to the bridge proposition. The railroad company in their proposition stated that they would be willing to pay the sum of $17,706 toward a new bridge over the river on Congress street or they would pay one-half the expense of a new bridge which would be the width of the present one. The city, however, does not consider it advisable to build such a narrow bridge and propose to build one the width of the street. The cost of the wider bridge would be about $43,000 and the amount which the city thinks the D. J. & C. should pay would be about $22,000. The railroad consider that a concrete bridge wide enough for two tracks could be built for $34,000 and would be willing to pay the $17,000, their half.

The proposition will be discussed in general this evening and it is on account of the deep interest to the city that all taxpayers are urged to attend the meeting.

AUTO ENGINE SAVES PLANT

Battle Creek's First Horseless Apparatus Proves Its Worth.

Battle Creek, Mich., July 28.—Battle Creek is gradually motorizing its fire department, and the second of the auto apparatus has been put into commission. Responding to the first alarm, auto engine No. 1 covered four blocks in less than a minute, and had water on a blaze in the Battle Creek gas plant in less than three minutes from the time of the alarm.

Fire officials figure that the time gained saved the gas company several thousand dollars, as a stiff blaze had started, so threatening that a general alarm was turned in.

Insane Woman Drowns in Well.

Peoria, Ill., July 28.—Mrs. Grace Farden, thirty years old, while insane, jumped into a well at the home of her sister and was found dead an hour later.

INSPECTOR HUGHES, WHO IS TRACKING MURDEROUS THIEVES WHO USE TAXICABS, AND SCENE OF KILLING

New York, July 28.—This city is greatly disturbed over a new form of robbery which has appeared here. The thieves are even more up to date than the celebrated "Raffles," because they operate by means of a taxicab.

The daring men drive up to a store, leaving a man in the auto ready to start it ahead at full speed. They enter the store, seize the cash drawer's contents at pistol's point and dart quickly into the taxi, which soon places them beyond pursuit. In the case of the bold robbery of Jacoby's store, Sixth avenue and Thirteenth street, they broke the front window, seized $5,000 worth of jewels, shot dead Jacoby's nephew, Adolph Stern, and escaped in a taxi. Next they entered Rosenbaum's shoe store in Bleeker street, but were repulsed in attempts to rob the cash drawer. Rosenbaum, shot at several times, narrowly escaped with his life. Another case that has attracted the attention of the local authorities, though it is beyond their jurisdiction, is the attempt to rob the postoffice at River Edge, N. Y., five miles from Hackensack. This case is associated with the two local ones because in each the thugs used an automobile of the taxicab model. Three men in an auto blew open the safe at River Edge in the course of a violent thunderstorm, but failed to get any plunder. Then the presence of three young men in an automobile in Hackensack the night before was recalled. The three made many inquiries about the police protection in the neighborhood and drove away from Hackensack in the direction of River Edge after drinking a great deal of liquor. Inspector Hughes, the young-est inspector on the New York police force, is making desperate efforts to break up the gang of holdup men. He has placed on the task every available man on his staff.

"WHAT IS SOCIALISM?"

Mr. Kaufman in his chapter on "The Ascent of Man" states that the next step after Oligarchy is Feudalism. He says:

"The Oligarchy was also but a transitory state; it held within itself at birth the seeds of its decay. Even the huge estates of the masters became over-burdened with slaves, and the slaves themselves thus grew to be the greatest menace to the condition that they had created. When an estate produced more slaves than it could maintain, it added an enemy to the Oligarchy in every slave to whom it granted freedom, for the freed slave could not compete against slave-labor. Forced, as all such progress is, along the line of least resistance, the master was compelled to say to his bondsmen: 'I can no longer support you. You must support yourself. I will therefore make you and your family my hereditary tenants. You may cultivate my land for your own purposes, giving me only certain percentage of all that you raise thereon. In this way my own power and material well-being will continue assured, and the responsibility of your maintenance will rest not upon me, but upon you.'

"That was the birth of Feudalism. The slave became a serf, and whereas he was once an asset of the individual, he now became an asset of the estate. In other words, he went with the land, and when one baron bought the estates of another—or when, as was far oftener the case, he secured them by force of arms or act of royal deprivation—he received the serfs along with the estate.

"Feudalism developed, of course, to enormous height, but it was all built upon the back of the serf. And yet the serf was in a condition not quite as bad as that of the slave. He had his own family, his own house, his own share of land, his own right to work, and if he must bear arms in time of war for his master, his master at all times owed him a certain physical protection."

NEED OF HYGIENIC DRINKING PLACES.

The improvised drinking-places installed during the G. A. R. encampment have given vivid illustration of the appreciation of these places in the downtown district, as well as in the parks. The majority of people have to come down town nearly every day, or at least two or three times a week, and during the summer season they are often thirsty. This is true of those who drive in here to trade, as well as the students or tourists or other travelers within our gates for a limited time. We have been surprised at the frequency with which we have noticed people using the cups, which have been left since the encampment on Pearl street between Washington and Huron. The way they were installed, not intended to be permanent, has caused this to be a rather mussy place at which to get a drink. Women and children especially were liable to get their feet wet in endeavoring to get a drink at this place, but it has not deterred them from stopping in large numbers to take a drink of fresh water. It seems to us that the city ought to install down town two or three modern, hygienic public drinking-places where the water flows constantly and where the cup is not used.

Our readers may have noticed the following news item recently in the Press from Lansing: "Secretary Dixon, of the state board of health, proposes to abolish the public drinking-cup in all public places, railway trains, steamships and other public conveyances, by direction of the state board of health in control announcing that the board will expect them to abolish this form of disease-carrier by the 20th of this month. The notice is expected to apply to public buildings as well, the board believing that under the authority vested in it relative to the protection of the public, there is authority for this radical move."

In view of this and the up-to-date-ness of Ypsilanti along lines healthful and educational, we ought not to be continuing something which the state board of health regards as dangerous to health. Let us have plenty of our excellent water for ourselves and our guests to drink and have it handy and have it appetizing and attractive in an overflowing fountain where all who desire may go and partake freely and without the slightest danger to their health in the doing so.

The Greater Affiliation.

To a discouraged remark of one New Yorker that appendicitis ran in his family, another savagely answered: "Thunderation! You don't know when you're well off; banging the piano ruins in mine!"

THE FINEST STUFF

that the foxes placed on an island will divide up the land among themselves and these boundary lines are respected by all. Every animal, practically, has his own range, said Mr. Seton. He does not wander about the country at random. I have known a deer to spend a whole summer within the radius of a quarter of a mile.

Mr. Seton treated next of the mating instinct, which he declared both beautiful and marvelous. He said that wherever two animals, otherwise similar, were respectively polygamous and monogamous, the former always went down before the latter. This is probably because the young of the monogamous animal has two adult protectors, instead of one. The antelopes, which are polygamous, are threatened with extinction, for they are the care of only the mother, the stronger male having no family duties. On the same plains and under similar conditions, the gray wolf, who mates for life, is thriving. In this case the two parents teach the young all they know. They are increasing in number, they are harder each year to kill.

As to the commandment, "Thou shalt not commit murder," there are many indications of murder being against the instincts of animals. It is more frequent in captivity than in wild life. No species could continue to exist if they murdered each other. One thousand rabbits could be put together and they would never strike at one another. One thousand cobras could safely be confined in one cage, or a thousand rattlesnakes could with safety be shut up together; but if these rattlesnakes and cobras were put in the same cage, one or the other species would go down. This fact you can see for yourself, said Mr. Seton. Two dogs will fight until one is killed, but the victor never finishes his opponent; he simply walks off when he has reduced him to subjection. But a dog with a cat delights in finishing her off.

As to the law relating to false witness, is there anything in this which animals respect? If a pack of hounds scatter to find a trail and an official member of the pack summons his fellows once, twice, thrice with a false alarm, he is thereafter utterly discredited.

Now as to the commandments which have been styled the "upper four" and deal with one's duty to God, to a superior power. Before Mr. Seton had quite decided to reform his theory about the Ten Commandments he chanced to look over the journals full of observations which he has kept for thirty years and consisted of as many volumes. He had denominated one bin into which he had placed some of his notes, "Unexplained Incidents," and some of these he related.

In 1886 in Saskatchewan valley he was out hunting white rabbits. He had lighted a fire, for it was intensely cold, when he presently espied a rabbit chased round and round by a weasel. In final desperation that rabbit ran directly for Mr. Seton, who had but an hour before tried to kill it. But now the little creature crouched confidently beside Mr. Seton, and it goes without saying that he found the safety he had desired.

Once a passenger pigeon had pressed by a falcon came down and lighted on the saddle of one of Custer's troopers. Other incidents illustrative of the animals' confidence in a power higher than themselves Mr. Seton interestingly related.

"The finest stuff they make in the world," was Mr. Seton's observation, when, last evening at his lecture in Normal Hall, a picture of Camp Sherzer was thrown on the screen and greeted with applause.

"Animal Heroes" was the subject of Mr. Seton's lecture, and a thrilling one it proved. Wolves have always interested him, the lecturer frankly said, ever since he fell under the charms of Red Riding Hood at a tender age. Wolves are found over nearly the whole northern hemisphere, or wherever the white man has thriven. They were driven out of England 600 years ago, and the last wolf in Scotland was killed 200 years ago by one of our ancestors," said Mr. Seton. In France they are found yet. Thus they have been associated with man from the beginning, and furnish one of the best illustrations of the fact that, contrary to what has been supposed, animals are not stationary in habit and action, but adapt themselves to changed conditions in quite the manner of man. Man and animals equally possess instinct and equally are adaptable.

In early times the wolf was a menace in Europe, January was known as 'wolf month.' The ordinary destruction by wolves was passed by without special comment, but from time to time there arose single wolves of such marked prowess that their extraordinary deeds were written in history. Of these there are about fifty. One such was La Bête who appeared in 1760 in southern France. He began by killing sheep; then he killed a shepherd with the sheep and when he had once known the joy of killing man, he came to be a man-eater. For the mere joy of killing he wiped out communities, for the few he spared fled. A price was placed on his head but not for price, nor for self-preservation could his killing be accomplished. In four years he had become the terror of a province. Eighty-three people he was known to have killed. King Louis XIV. was appealed to. For a time the king was too busy with pleasure-seeking to heed the message, but when at last he addressed himself to the situation, he did so in a manner most sage. First he ordered a week of prayer and fasting, for the people to reflect on their sins, ending with a service in the cathedral at which prayers were offered for deliverance from this peril. The king next doubled the bounty; he made it 20,000 pounds in gold. He ordered all the peasantry to assemble in the village with hunting hounds and weapons. He sent down his own mighty pack of wolf hounds. Then he dispatched his entire standing army of 20,000 men. When all had assembled on the appointed first day of August, there was a total of 42,000 men and about 4,000 dogs, half of them wolf hounds. Days were consumed in spreading out in a great circle, shoulder to shoulder, that they might surround La Bête. La Bête was found to be without the circle. Again the circle was spread. Again La Bête was found to be without, gloriing in picking off the stragglers. For six weeks one wolf kept off 42,000 men and 4,000 hounds. At last he was surrounded and, with considerable difficulty, killed. He weighed 150 pounds. His skin was mounted and sent to the king, where it remained in the Tuileries until in 1871 the palace was burned.

In decided contrast with this was an experience of Mr. Seton's in France where he was studying. In the late afternoon he would go down on the beach to paint, and there, when the sun set, he would hear the rallying call of wolves. It was a thrilling and ominous sound, yet he was assured by that, were a little girl to lead a lamb through the woods and meet a wolf, the wolf would walk away, that never did they harm a human being. Why is this? asked Mr. Seton. Are they as strong as wolves in former days? "They certainly are. The answer is that they have had a modern education, and this has consisted of a course in gun powder."

What about the wolves in Russia? "There the peasants are not allowed to carry firearms and whatever this mandate obtains the wolves will be without this modern education. The same is true of the grizzly bears. They run like rabbits at sight of man. 'I would be willing,' said Mr. Seton, 'to walk from Maine to California, without protection, so far as animals are concerned.' The human race would furnish cause for any fear that might exist, Mr. Seton decidedly implied."

There are ways in which animals are superior to man. Their sense of direction is one. He told of being lost in a snowstorm on the prairie and being taken safely back to camp when he trusted utterly to his horse.

After relating the state of siege in which a wolf and his pack had kept Paris for a long period, killing people in the square of Notre Dame, Mr. Seton suggested that the stories of Hercules and Taccus might easily be considered with more credulity. Mr. Seton closed with the observation, "Our race could not have existed if our ancestors had not known how to climb a tree."

Advancement in School.

At the special school meeting this week it was voted to comply with the state law and make the school a legal high school by employing another teacher to assist the principal in the ninth, tenth, eleventh and twelfth grades. The board may now try to get the school on the approved list of the Michigan State Normal college as the majority of the pupils wish to go to that institution as soon as they finish here.

Woman's World

Mme. Eames Weds Emilio de Gogorza in Paris.

MME. EMMA EAMES-DE GOGORZA.

The marriage recently in Paris of the famous prima donna, Mme. Emma Eames, to Emilio de Gogorza, the equally well known baritone, terminates a rather sensational romance of several years' standing.

Mme. Eames, as all the world knows, was formerly the wife of Julian Story, and this is also De Gogorza's second matrimonial venture, his first wife, Mrs. Elsa de Gogorza, having obtained a divorce from him recently. At one time there was much unpleasant gossip about Mme. Eames having given Mrs. Elsa de Gogorza $100,000 for setting her husband free from hymenial chains. These rumors, however, were entirely without foundation, as the only recompense for alienated affections the first Mrs. de Gogorza has ever received is represented in a monthly check of $300, which is sent to her regularly from her former husband.

Many beautiful wedding gifts were received by Mme. Eames from the De Gogorza family. The baritone's mother presented her new daughter-in-law with a collection of rare old Spanish fans, and a sister-in-law sent yards of priceless silk lace.

Mme. Eames de Gogorza has a sumptuous apartment in Paris, which probably will be the future home of the singers when their professional engagements allow of domestic life, for the beautiful soprano will continue to charm the musical public with her glorious voice.

Before the opening of the New York opera season next fall the newly wedded pair will make a concert tour, singing in most of the large cities of this country.

BREAD WITHOUT FLOUR.

French Machine Transforms the Wheat Directly Into Dough.

In France bread has been made without flour in a machine that transforms the wheat directly into dough. This machine shows a large screw turning loosely in a case on the inner surface of which is a screw thread running in an opposite direction.

Between the main threads on the cylinder are smaller threads and the depth of the groove becomes progressively smaller from one end to the other, so that it will hold the entire wheat grain as it enters the machine, at the same time accommodating only the pulverized wheat at the exit.

The wheat is prepared by a thorough washing, after which operation, says Harper's Weekly, about a pint of tepid water to a pound of grain is added, the whole mixture being allowed to stand some six hours. Then the grains of wheat have swollen to twice their ordinary size.

The mixture is then treated with yeast and salt and is poured into the machine. It falls between the threads of the moving screw and of the fixed contrary screw, which simultaneously crush the envelope and body of the grain, making of them a homogeneous mixture that forms a smooth paste.

Bread made by this process contains a succession of holes whose size increases as they approach the crust, which is thin. The odor given off is said to be especially agreeable.

WHAT WOMEN ARE DOING.

Mrs. Lillian M. N. Stevens of Portland, Me., has been appointed by President Taft as a delegate to the thirteenth international congress on alcoholism. The congress will be held at The Hague next September.

The first international convention of farm women ever held is to meet in Colorado Springs, Colo., next October. The object of the convention is the betterment of farm life for women.

Better homes, sanitation, higher standards of living, the business management of farm homes and the general improvement of rural conditions for women will be discussed.

Women all over the country are writing to Chief Justice Walter A. Clark of North Carolina expressing approval of his address at the recent commencement exercises of Elon college. In this address Justice Clark not only advocated equal suffrage, but prophesied that within a few years the women of North Carolina would be exercising the full right of suffrage.

STILL HAVING FUN WITH HIM.

Percy—Weally, Daisy, I dawned so strenuously in that last waltz that me head feels light, doncher know.

Daisy—Indeed! I supposed that sensation was so common with you that you had ceased to notice it.

Airship Mutiny.

The man accused of inciting mutiny on the airship was heavily ironed and brought before the captain. "Was he caught in the act?" asked the captain, when he had glared menacingly upon the culprit. "Yes, sir," replied the first mate, "I caught him in the act of tacking up cards bearing the mutinous expression, 'Back to the land.'"

Evolution of the Nursing Bottle.

The original nursing bottle was a cow's horn, to the small end of which were sewed two pieces of leather, as a finger of a glove, and the infant drew its nourishment between the stitches. According to Dr. D. Forsyth, fifteenth century mothers used to nurse their babies for close upon three years, a duration still customary among the Japanese and Greenlanders. In the time of the Stuarts it had declined to between eighteen months and two years. In the time of the Georges it fell to one year, and now he reckoned the average as eight months. During the Hanoverian period the practice of feeding babies artificially became somewhat common. Cow's milk was not then considered just the food for a baby deprived of its mother's milk, and the substance called "pap" was introduced through the cow's horn. "Pap" was a mixture of crust soaked water and sugar. A baby that thrived on it was usually one of rare constitution. The nursing bottle with a long rubber stem succeeded the cow's horn, and by degrees the comparative sanitary feeding bottle of today was introduced.—New York World.

An Island in a Cloud.

White island, thirty miles to the northeast of New Zealand, is perhaps the most extraordinary island in the world. It is an enormous mass of rock nearly three miles in circumference, rising 900 feet above the sea, and is perpetually enveloped in dark clouds, which are visible for nearly 100 miles. The island consists almost entirely of sulphur, with a small percentage of gypsum. Some years ago an attempt was made to float a company to work the sulphur, which is of high quality, but sufficient capital was not subscribed. Therefore the export of sulphur from White island is still very small. In the interior is a lake fully fifty acres in extent, the water of which has a temperature of 110 degrees F. and is strongly impregnated with acids. On one side of this lake are craters from which steam escapes with great force and noise. This steam and the vapor from the lake form the dark cloud that envelops the island.

West Indies English.

The most question as to why English is spoke as she is has apparently been settled by a colored mammy of the West Indies. In a recent visit to the old school she accompanied her mistress and after returning regaled her envious neighbors with vivid accounts of her travels.

"In dem Wes' Indies," she remarked, "dey don't talk Unalied States. No, suh, dey don't. Dey talks foreign an' English—English, yes, suh. An' dat English dah ain't de same as what we all talks. No, suh. Dey says down dah, dey says, 'ain't' for 'ain't' and 'cain't' for 'can't' an' such like doin's. Yes, suh. An' you wan' to know how come dey talk dat fool talk? Why, suh, when he English deys busted away from de Unalied States dey was so 'shamed dey'd evah belonned to his dat dey trahd to get eben, an' jes' on'tn spite dey done change de pronouncment of de whole language."—St. Louis Republic.

There is more Catarrh in this section of the country than all other diseases together, and until the last few years was supposed to be incurable. For a great many years doctors pronounced it a local disease and prescribed local remedies, and by constantly failing to cure with local treatment, pronounced it incurable. Science has proven catarrh to be a constitutional disease and therefore requires constitutional treatment.

Half's Catarrh Cure, manufactured by F. J. Cheney & Co., Toledo, Ohio, is the only constitutional cure on the market. It is taken internally in doses from 10 drops to a teaspoonful. It acts directly on the blood and mucous surfaces of the system. They offer one hundred dollars for any case it fails to cure. Send for circulars and testimonials.

MACKIES FEAR HOODOOS.

Weird Rites Practiced by Athletics in Warming Up.

If active and well trained superstitions would win games the Athletics would never lose. They have more of that stuff to the square inch than nine out of ten clubs. Here's where the fans are let in on a couple.

As everybody knows, the infielders have a practice ball that they throw around during the time that the pitcher is warming up.

That ball cannot be thrown back to the Athletic bench at random. No, siree! It has to go through the mystic channels or else the game is gummed. The last man to handle that ball must be Claude Derrick. He throws it to Jack Barry, who is hors du combat, or has a bum runner, and when Jack gets the ball he touches John Shibe on the knee. That repels any hoodoo.

When the pitcher takes his place to start things off and to warm up between innings, the last ball must go to Eddie Collins and then straight back to the twirler. Nobody else is allowed to catch the last ball, which the catcher usually smashes down to second. That is to keep off the hoodoos.

PECULIAR THUMB HELPS FORD
Yanks' Crack Pitcher Wets Ball, but Little Digit Does the Rest.

The success of Russell Ford's pitching is a peculiarly shaped thumb. The digit bends back and the second joint seems to be double jointed. He throws all of his spitters off the freaky look.

ing thumb. By simply twisting it different ways he makes the ball break accordingly.

He has three separate and distinct spitters. By a slight change of his thumb he can make the ball break in, out or down. It all depends upon the position of the batsman as to which he may dash up. Catcher Sweeney is forced to "ride" with the ball and has to guess, like the batter, which way the pellet is going to shoot.

Ford wets the ball very little, and, despite the fact that many players have claimed their errors were due to grabbing a damp spot, it is not so with Ford's ball. He doesn't wet a spot any larger than a dime.

But it is different with other spitball twirlers. For instance, Jack Chesbro, father of the wet fling, would dampen his ball so much that it resembled a sponge filled with water.

Big Ed Walsh is another pitcher who gives the ball a good, thorough soaking, and the White Sox infielders have to be careful how they leave it to the base after making a stop.

DIAMOND CHAT

Felder Jones is scouting for the St. Louis American league club on the Pacific coast.

Young Nunemaker has crowded out Bill Carrigan as the grand vizier of the Boston Americans' catching staff.

Ty Cobb, the "Demon Tiger," has the greatest ambition ever possessed by a ball player—that of making 300 hits in one season.

Hal Chase is still reaping rich dividends in his old trick of taking a long lead off second, drawing a throw to second from the catcher and then rushing to third and making it easily.

Roger Bresnahan believes that Pitcher Roy Golden is one of the greatest youngsters in the business. With another year of experience Roy will rank among the high class slappers of either league, says Bres.

Manager McGraw of the Giants has given Pitcher Drucie every opportunity to get started this season, but the Texan hasn't had the confidence and is disheartened. He loses control so quickly at times that in close games it is impossible to get another pitcher warmed up and on the slab in time to cut off runs.

HOW DAUBERT BROKE IN.

Failure to Open Cafe Caused Brooklyn's Star to Take Up Baseball.

Failure to obtain the location desired for a cafe was responsible for Jake Daubert's decision to make baseball his profession. The Brooklyn's first baseman as a boy was employed in the coal mines in the neighborhood of his home in Llewellyn, Pa. His father had been a miner, and Jake and his two brothers followed in his footsteps. Every opportunity Jake had he was playing ball. He made his professional debut with the Kane club, which later blew up. He then threw his fortunes with Marion, another Pennsylvania team. It was while playing with

The Marion club, like the Kane club, also blew up, and he went back to work in the mines. Cleveland ordered him to report in the spring of the next year. Jake says he will always remember his last day's work as a miner. Through a bit of carelessness he was nearly killed. The superintendent of the mines told him if he didn't stick to baseball and give up mining he would chase him out of town with a

PROTECT YOUR BOOKS

They're too valuable to be strewn about the room or house exposed to dust and damage. Of course you can't help it, if your book-case is full and of the old style solid construction. Better get rid of such a case, or start a new one that will always accommodate your books without being either too large or too small—one that grows with your library and always fits it.

We are now making a special display of "GLOBE-WERNICKE" and "WEIS" Sectional Book Cases, at Factory Prices, ranging from $1.80 a section up. Enough said.

POULOS SUCCEEDS AT LAST IN THE NUPTIAL GAME

Wednesday afternoon at two o'clock in the city of Grand Rapids, George Poulos and Miss Maude Dolby of this city were united in marriage by a clergyman of the Methodist church. There were no attendants. On Thursday the bridal couple returned to the home of Mrs. Poulos, Mr. and Mrs. H. L. Dolby, who live in the country near here. Last evening they left for Grand Ledge, which will be their future home, as Mr. Poulos has a candy store in that place as well as in Ypsilanti.

The news of the marriage came as a great surprise to their friends and acquaintances, as the attachment had been totally unsuspected. Mrs. Poulos has attended the Normal high school and for the past year or so has been employed in the candy store.

ACCUSES HIM OF ASSAULT

Carrollton School Teacher Causes Arrest of Saginaw Man.

Saginaw, Mich., July 28.—Frank Carmichael is held at Central police station for an alleged assault on Margaret Dalton, a school teacher of Carrollton. Carmichael was arrested at his home and professes to know nothing of the crime, claiming he was intoxicated at the time.

Miss Dalton, according to her story, crossed the Sixth street bridge about 6:30 o'clock and was forcibly taken by Carmichael to a secluded spot and kept until 11 o'clock. Carmichael's face shows signs of having been scratched and pummeled. Carmichael is thirty-five years old and married.

Still the Open Kettle.

One very seldom sees a washing machine in use in the south, says Frank P. Fogg in the National Magazine. The old-fashioned way of washing in the open air at the side of a brook or at the well and boiling the clothes in an iron kettle over a smoking open fire is still in vogue.
